

I am concerned that by using the loophole of an "established business relationship" banks, credit card companies and long distance phone services will be invading the privacy of Indiana households which have clearly asked not to be harassed by telemarketers. In my experience, the services I might be called about by these companies who already do business with me are not relevant to my current association with them.

thank you,

Lisa Summers